Editorial Review

Review

"This is a rompin', stompin', chompin' adventure! When an unlucky group of humans who hardly know each other are thrust back into the age of the dinosaurs, it's hard to know if their brains and social cohesion will triumph over big teeth. If you're keeping score, mammals and reptiles both rack up points. A gripping page turner in the spirit of a Stephen King thriller. Grab a copy!" --Hal Barwood, screenwriter of Dragonslayer and author of Shadowcop

"Vivid characterizations, descriptions that pull a reader into the story, and a fast-moving plot full of twists and turns that will have you hanging on for the ride and wondering what could possibly come next--Geoff Jones has managed to achieve all three. A page-turner par excellence, an impressive debut, an author to watch--and a book begging to be made into a movie." --Rosalind James, bestselling author of the Escape to New Zealand series

"Geoff Jones has written a rip-snorter of a debut novel. Ten people are casually ordering beverages or waiting on customers in a downtown Denver coffee shop when suddenly the building and its occupants time travel back to the days of the dinosaurs. As individual personalities emerge, their numbers are winnowed down by the ferocious onslaught of predatory prehistoric beasts. Using detailed descriptions of the dinosaurs, their behavior and their habitat, Jones creates the Cretaceous era in believable detail." -- Kerry Pettis, Broomfield Enterprise

"Loads of fun." - Jason M. Hough, Bestselling Author of The Darwin Elevator and Zero World
