Age-Related Macular Degeneration: Principles and Practice From Raven Pr

This volume is a clinical reference on age-related macular degeneration, the leading cause of new legal blindness and visual loss in the elderly. Noted experts offer practical guidelines on diagnosis and evaluation and address clinical decision-making problems such as whether fluorescein angiography is needed, whether the patient should be referred to a retinal specialist, and whether the patient would benefit from treatment. The book provides coverage of medical, surgical, and laser treatment options and describes resources for visual rehabilitation of patients who cannot be treated. A chapter by the president of a national patient support group offers valuable insight into patients concerns.
