Deadly Harvest By Mary Rosenblum

Rachel O'Connor is Blossom City's landscaper and her passion is gardening.

To the delight of the elderly residents, she is hired to renew and improve the Retirement Village's decrepit gardens.

Back with her trusty team of landscapers, she plans and starts to execute brilliant ideas for the space.

Soon after she starts however, there are rumours circling the Village of fraud.

When those that have complained suddenly pass away and foul play is suspected, it is down to Rachel, her fiancé Jeff and Blossom's police department to uncover the mysteries that surround the Retirement Village.

Meanwhile, in Blossom, a vandal is causing havoc in the town.

Graffiti on buildings, smashed cars, and muggings are all putting the locals on edge.

Is it connected to the activity at the claims of fraud at the retirement home?

With threats made to Jeff's career and new rules for the community, it becomes a race against time for him and Rachel to track down the culprit.

Hounded by questions from frightened elderly residents, they piece together clues from friends and discover events from the past.

The more that is uncovered, the more alarming it is.

Are the elderly residents safe?

What lies beyond the Deadly Harvest?

'Deadly Harvest' was previously published as 'Garden View'.

Praise for Mary Rosenblum's Gardening series:

‘An appealing new detective with a green thumb, a passion for plants, and a sharp eye for clues.’ - Susan Wittig Albert

‘We can’t relax until the landscaper heroine, Rachel O’Connor, unearths the solution to some very nasty murders.’ - Ann Ripley, author of ‘Death of a Political Plant’

Mary Rosenblum is an accomplished cheesemaker, pilot, and novelist. ‘Deadly Harvest’ is the fourth book in her Gardening Mysteries series, starring landscaper Rachel O’Connor against a beautiful Oregon backdrop. She has received several awards for her work and is also known for her science fiction work.
